Monitoring the Future 2011

Monitoring the Future's 2011 report has been released. Major national findings include:

On the rise:

- Marijuana use among teens rose in 2011 for the fourth straight year—a sharp contrast to the considerable decline that had occurred in the preceding decade. Daily marijuana use is now at a 30-year peak level among high school seniors.
- “Synthetic marijuana,” which until earlier this year was legally sold and goes by such names as “K2” and “spice,” was added to the study's coverage in 2011; one in every nine high school seniors (11.4%) reported using that drug in the prior 12 months.
- Energy drinks are being consumed by about one third of teens, with use highest among younger teens.

Marijuana, Synthetic Marijuana & Energy Drinks

On the decline:

- Alcohol use—and, importantly, occasions of heavy drinking—continued a long-term gradual decline among teens, reaching historically low levels in 2011.
- Drugs showing some evidence of declines in use this year include: inhalants, cocaine powder, crack cocaine, the narcotic drug Vicodin, the stimulant drug Adderall, sedatives, tranquilizers, and over-the-counter cough and cold medicines used to get high.

OUTCOMES FROM OREGON'S SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT 12-MONTH FOLLOW-UP STUDY

The Addiction & Mental Health Division is often asked by legislators if Oregon Addiction Treatment actually works? The State recently completed a 12 Month Follow-up to answer that question. Karen Wheeler reports, “Oregon recently released the results of a long-term outcome study to determine the effectiveness of publicly funded addiction treatment in producing positive social and behavioral changes for the populations served by 15 representative providers. A sample of almost 600 people participated in the follow-up study. The results are overwhelmingly positive. 12-month follow-up interviews show people who are able to access addiction treatment improve in terms of their ability to stay clean and sober when compared to baseline survey results. For illicit drugs, 90% reported abstinence at 12 months when asked about their use patterns in the past 30-days! For alcohol, 76% reported abstinence. Other key findings of interest include the positive mental health outcomes such as reduced suicidal thoughts, reduced depression and anxiety. We also used the opportunity to study clients’ satisfaction with services and areas needing improvement in the treatment system.”

Karen Wheeler, MA, Addiction Programs Administrator
Oregon Health Authority, Addictions and Mental Health Division (AMH)

Between intake and 12 months follow-up substance use in the past 30 days dropped by:

- ↓ 93% for amphetamine use,
- ↓ 83% for heroin use,
- ↓ 78% for cannabis use,
- ↓ 71% for prescription drug abuse,
- ↓ 47% for binge drinking (5 or more drinks within a few hours)

Other positive outcomes:

- ↓ 87% drop in arrests in the past 30 days,
- ↓ 41% drop in days spent in jail,
- ↓ 29% increase in participants reporting full or part-time employment,
- ↓ 22% increase in those who said they have clean and sober friends

Opportunities for improvement:

When talking about their treatment experience, participants were least satisfied with transportation options to and from treatment.

Based on participant feedback, there are opportunities for better treatment matching to better serve younger clients and individuals where language barriers exist.

DUII clients had poorer outcomes than non-DUII clients.
